

Family Activity

Use a broom to play limbo with your family. Talk about how in limbo you had to get as low as possible to get under the broom in order to win. Remind your family that when Jesus washed the feet of the disciples, He was doing a job that the lowest servant would do. The lowest servant was the one with the least important, or lowest, position. That servant had to do the lowest, or least desirable, jobs. Jesus was teaching His disciples that we should be willing to serve others by doing things for them. Point out to your family that a broom, like the one used in the game, is used to sweep and clean. Many times cleaning is considered a lowly task, meaning it is a task that no one really wants to do. However, one way to serve others is to seek out a lowly task and do it. Ask each family member to choose from a list of cleaning tasks to do this week. Check up on them during the week to make sure they have completed the task they chose and to thank them for serving the rest of the family by completing that task.
